

D/
center whiteness

By Thinh
Nguyen

Decentering
whiteness

Its starts with you!
But remember, this is not about you!
It's about you,
buying into the system of whiteness.

A social, political,
and cultural structure
that was formed to advantage
white, Protestant,
heterosexual,
property owning
males.

You want change?
You want a just and equitable world?
What are you
willing to do to achieve it?

Are you willing to refuse your
whiteness
to claim an identity that is not a system of oppression?

Are you willing to commit to social justice
by creating a more equitable structure that privileges none
over another?

As long as you
benefit from
whiteness,
there's no hope
for you!

whiteness exists
and continues to persist is because you let it.

Because you're not against it,
you're not actively dismantling it.

Good intentions are simply just that: good intentions.
It's not enough.

It's not enough
to merely desire diversity and inclusion.

Diversity and inclusion for whom?

Who decides to include or exclude
whom?

Who has the power
and rights to do so?

The world is already diverse,
diversity without access to power for justice and equity
is tokenism centralizing
whiteness,
masquerading as equality.

It's not enough to desire solidarity
and unity.

Solidarity and unity to resist
whom?

Whiteness?

All the "enemies"
are operating and benefiting
from this system of Whiteness.

Remember, as long as you benefit
from whiteness,
you are the problem,
maintaining and upholding its supremacy!
Are you willing to resist against yourself?

It is not enough to expose and acknowledge whiteness and its self-entitlement.

That is just another way to centralize
whiteness
by exhibiting your white fragility
to reconcile your

white guilt

So decenter
yourself!
Decenter your
whiteness!

If you cannot even decenter yourself and your
whiteness,
how can you
decenter whiteness itself, and dismantle this unfair social structures?

How?

Introspect
and self-reflect Remember, this is not about you!

© Thinh Nguyen
April 18, 2017
Los Angeles CA